

Political Contributions

Exelon Corporation's success depends on sound public policies at the national, state and local levels. Issues vital to Exelon's ability to recognize value for its stakeholders are debated and decided in the U.S. Congress, in state legislatures and in local forums across the country.

Federal and Pennsylvania law prohibit companies from making political contributions to Federal and Pennsylvania candidates. Under Maryland law, Exelon and its affiliated companies can give no more than $4,000 to a political candidate, including other state PACs, and $10,000 total during an election cycle. Under Illinois law, Exelon and its affiliated companies can give no more than $10,000 to a political candidate during an election cycle. In certain other states, corporations are permitted to contribute to state election campaigns. Exelon operates in accordance with all relevant state and Federal laws.

Exelon Corporation, Baltimore Gas and Electric Company and PECO Energy Company have established political action committees that are funded solely through voluntary employee contributions (ExelonPAC, BGEPAC and PECOPAC). Exelon Generation Company and Commonwealth Edison Company also have Illinois state political action committees which may be funded by both employee and corporate contributions (ComEd PAC and ExGenPAC). Exelon provides limited administrative support to all our political action committees.

These PACS offer eligible employees a direct means to voluntarily participate in shaping public policy and expressing views on issues related to our business. The PACS operate in accordance with all relevant state and Federal laws. Information about ExelonPAC is available on the website of the Federal Election Commission at www.fec.gov.

In the interest of transparency for our shareholders and stakeholders, Exelon has posted its Corporate Political Contributions Guidelines on its website. These Guidelines are intended to provide corporate governance, control, oversight and procedural guidance for corporate contributions of money, property or services for political activities in Illinois and other states that allow corporate contributions to the political process and for political expenditures in areas where permitted. Exelon's political contributions during the reporting period were all made in accordance with its Corporate Political Contributions Guidelines.

Exelon is also making available a report listing Exelon's political contributions (the "Report"). The Report also sets forth the United States trade associations and other similar non-profit organizations to which Exelon annually paid dues of $50,000 or more. Exelon has asked these organizations to identify the portion of those dues that were used for expenditures or contributions that are non-deductible under Section 162(e)(1)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code. The Report will be updated and reviewed by the corporate governance committee of the Exelon board of directors semi-annually.
